Nashville Palace

The Nashville Palace is a historic honky-tonk and dance hall located in the heart of Music Valley, just across from the Grand Ole Opry. Established in 1977, it's known as the place where legends like Randy Travis got their start and where live country music still plays seven days a week. Guests enjoy Southern comfort food, cocktails, moonshine-inspired drinks, and one of Nashville's most beloved hardwood dance floors.

From locals line dancing under the neon to visitors experiencing "real Nashville" for the first time, The Nashville Palace keeps classic country and community tradition alive all season long.
